To—The Commissioner of the Orissa Division.

WITH reference to your letter No. 72L.F., dated the 19th March 1909, regarding the donation of Rs. 1,750 made by Mahant Govinda Ramanuj Das of the Utterparsa Math for the creation of a scholarship to be named after His Honour the Lieutenant-Governor, I am directed to communicate sanction to your proposals that the amount should be invested in the 3½ per cent. Government securities, and that a Trust Fund should be opened to be known as the Baker Scholarship Fund.

2. The interest will be utilised for the award of a scholarship of Rs. 5 a month to a student of the Puri Zilla School who passes the Matriculation Examination of the Calcutta University, subject to the following conditions:—

(1) It should be awarded to the successful candidate who most needs such help;

(2) It should not be held with any other scholarship; and

REVISION OF SYLLABUSES OF STUDIES FOR LOWER PRIMARY SCHOOLS—STANDARDS III TO VI.

GENERAL DEPARTMENT—EDUCATION.

Darjeeling, the 20th April 1909.

RESOLUTION—No. 109T.—G.

READ—

The Resolution of this Government, No. 1028T.—G., dated the 10th June 1907.

The letter from the Director of Public Instruction, Bengal, No. 11688, dated the 5th July 1907.

The Notification of this Government, No. 1850, dated the 12th August 1907.

The letter to the Registrar of the Calcutta University, No. 2390T.—G., dated the 21st September 1907.

Circular No. 1T.—G., dated the 17th September 1907.

The letter from the Director of Public Instruction, Bengal, No. 2455, dated the 18th February 1909.

The circumstances which led to the revision of the syllabus of studies for Standards I to VI as prescribed by Resolution No. 1, dated the 1st January 1901, were explained in detail in Resolution No. 1028T.—G., dated the 10th June 1907, and it is unnecessary to recapitulate them here. The revised syllabus for the infant section and Standards I and II of boys' and girls' schools, which constitute the Lower Primary Standard, was published with the Resolution of the 10th June 1907. The Special Committee which was appointed by Government to revise the courses of studies has since drawn up a revised syllabus for Standards III to VI. Standards III and IV constitute the Upper Primary and Standards V and VI the Middle School Standard. The revised syllabus for these Standards together with an explanatory note by Mr. Earle, then Director of Public Instruction, was published with Government Notification No. 1850, dated the 12th August 1907, for general information and criticism. The Calcutta University, various public bodies and individual gentlemen, official and non-official, who are interested in educational matters, were invited to offer their opinion on the proposed syllabus. The original syllabus has now been modified in the light of the suggestions which have been offered. As indicating some of the more important modifications, it may be mentioned that introductions have been written for the syllabuses in Arithmetic and Hygiene; the syllabuses in Hygiene for boys' and girls' schools have been amplified in the light of the suggestions made by the Drainage Commission with regard to the prevention and cure of malaria; the syllabuses in English and Geography have been remodelled and elementary Physical Science has been eliminated from the Science syllabus as being unsuitable for the stages of instruction represented by Standards III to VI. The syllabus in Drawing has been carefully modified after consideration by a specially selected Sub-Committee, and discretionary power has been allowed to the authorities of girls' schools to devote more time to needle-work than was originally allotted. The Lieutenant-Governor approves of the new syllabus as finally revised by the Special Committee.

2. The date of the introduction of the new syllabus has now to be considered. In the Resolution of the 10th June 1907, mentioned in the preamble, it was decided that the last Lower Primary Examination according to the existing syllabus should be held at the end of 1910, and that children beginning their studies in 1910 for the Lower Primary Examination to be held at the end of 1911 should study the revised syllabus. The Lieutenant-Governor accepts the recommendation of the Director of Public Instruction that pupils who pass the Lower Primary and the Upper Primary Examinations at the end of 1910 should study the revised syllabus for Standards III and V respectively during 1911. It is not anticipated that the transition from the old to the new syllabus will be attended by any real difficulties at these stages.

On the other hand, if the new courses are introduced slowly and gradually, as the students who commence the study of the revised syllabus for Standard I in 1910 pass on to the upper stages, the old courses of study which have been condemned as unsatisfactory will not be wholly eliminated before the year 1916. It is unnecessary and undesirable to wait for such a length of time. The Upper Primary and Middle Scholarship Examinations will, therefore, be held for the last time in 1911 according to the existing course. Pupils who begin their studies in 1911 for the examinations to be held in 1912 will study the revised syllabus in 1911; and in the following year, 1912, the new syllabus will be in force in all the Standards.

ORDER--Ordered that the revised syllabus for Standards III to VI together with the revised memorandum be published for general information.

By order of the Lieutenant-Governor of Bengal,

J. G. CUMMING,

Offg. Secy. to the Govt. of Bengal.

Memorandum on the syllabuses proposed by the Special Committee for standards III to VI, and the recommendations made by that Committee as regards the preparation of text-books.

Introductory Remarks.

1. It is unnecessary to state at length on this occasion the defects which exist in respect of the courses of study followed in standards III to VI, or as regards the text-books in use in schools teaching those standards, because the subject has already been discussed in public. In General Department, Education, Resolution No. 658, dated the 7th February 1905, it was stated that the principal points in respect of which rural schools in Bengal were deficient were—

(1) that the courses of instruction were too long, too advanced and diversified; and

(2) that the prescribed text-books were not written in simple language commonly used by the people.

2. The question has been further discussed in General Department, Education, Resolution No. 1028T.—G., dated the 10th June 1907, with which the revised syllabuses for standards I and II and the arrangements made for writing suitable text-books for those standards have been promulgated. In the Resolution just referred to it has been explained that it is unnecessary, and indeed impracticable, to have separate courses of study and text-books for rural and urban schools. The Resolution therefore states that the revised syllabuses and the arrangements made for the preparation of text-books apply to schools in both rural and urban areas.

3. In paragraphs 81, 106 and 115 of my Report on Public Instruction in Bengal for 1905-06 I stated that the scheme of vernacular education, as sanctioned by Government in the year 1901, had resulted in comparatively empty lower classes in Government and aided high schools. I also stated that the effect of the system had been generally to retard the progress of vernacular education in standards III to VI. I observed that parents were anxious enough to send their children to Government and aided high schools, as soon as they were fit for entry into the classes where the medium of instruction was English, because in general the teaching in such schools was better; but that parents not unfrequently had their children educated up to that stage in privately managed schools, which were not subject to the vernacular system of education. I stated that it was hoped that the revision of the courses of study in the vernacular, which was being taken in hand, would result in modifying this anomalous state of affairs. I indicated that the defects in the vernacular courses of study followed in standards III to VI, and in the text-books used in schools teaching according to those standards, were the same as those which had been found in the courses of study followed in lower primary schools and in the text-books used in such schools.

4. As regards the teaching of English in high and middle English schools I observed, in paragraph 82 of my Report on Public Instruction in Bengal for 1905-06, that the lower classes of privately managed schools were preferred to similar classes in Government and aided schools, because more importance is attached to the teaching of English in the former schools. I stated that in Government and aided high schools English was taught as a second language in the four classes below the fourth class, in which class teaching through the medium of English begins. I observed, however, that the transition from the fifth to the fourth class was too abrupt, and that it was long before a student had any idea of what was being taught to him through the medium of English. I stated that the revision of the courses of study in classes below the high school stage was under consideration, and that this question would then be carefully considered. I indicated that possibly some system of oral instruction in English in the lower classes would be suggested.

5. In the ensuing paragraphs I give a brief account of the syllabuses proposed by the Special Committee, and of the suggestions made by that Committee as regards the preparation of text-books, for standards III to VI. The latter subject will, however, be considered separately at greater length hereafter. This memorandum chiefly concerns the syllabuses proposed.

The English Syllabus.

6. The Special Committee are chiefly indebted to Mr. W. W. Hornell and the Rev. J. Lamb for this syllabus. English is taught only in high and middle English schools. It is not proposed to make any change in this respect. According to standing orders the teaching of English as a second language is begun in the schools referred to in standard III, and continues till the end of the vernacular course terminating with standard VI. It is not proposed to alter this arrangement, because it is considered that the main course of instruction up to the stage indicated is rightly imparted through the medium of the vernacular. There is, however, good reason for believing that sufficient attention is not paid to the teaching of English in the standards referred to.

7. In the first place, the Special Committee propose that English should be taught for eight hours a week in high and middle English schools for boys, and for seven hours a week in high and middle English schools for girls, instead of as heretofore, for four hours only. Secondly, it is considered that if the teaching of English is to be successful, the modern developments of language teaching cannot be ignored. The Special Committee therefore propose that the teaching of English should in future be based on the principles of what is known as the "Direct Method." In the introduction to the syllabus an attempt has been made to set forth the main principles of this method, and to make a few suggestions for their application.

The Vernacular Syllabus.

8. The Special Committee are indebted to the Revd. J. F. Hewitt and Babu Ishan Chandra Ghose for this syllabus. The main syllabus will be applicable to all classes of schools, but in middle vernacular and upper primary schools the additional writing syllabus appended to the main syllabus will also be taught. Six hours a week will be assigned to this branch of instruction in high and middle English schools, but in middle vernacular and upper primary schools one and-a-half additional hours will be devoted to the additional writing syllabus.

The Arithmetic Syllabus.

9. The Special Committee are indebted to the Revd. J. Mitchell and Babu Srikanta Karmakar for this syllabus. The main syllabus will be applicable to all classes of schools but in middle vernacular and upper primary schools the additional Subhankari syllabus will also be taught. Four hours a week will be assigned to this branch of instruction in high and middle English schools, but two additional hours will be devoted to the additional Subhankari syllabus in middle vernacular and upper primary schools.

Science Syllabus.

10. The Special Committee received much assistance in regard to this syllabus from Professors Cunningham, Mahalanabis and P. C. Ray. The syllabus contains four* subjects, viz., natural phenomena, plant-life, animal-life and elementary physical science. Three of these subjects only are compulsory. In standard III these are the three first-named; while in standards IV to VI natural phenomena and plant-life are compulsory, a choice being allowed for a third subject between animal-life and elementary physics. The treatment of the first three subjects follows that adopted in respect of these subjects in the syllabus for the lower standards already published. Two hours a week will be devoted to this branch of instruction.

The Hygiene Syllabus for Boys' Schools, and the Hygiene and Domestic Economy Syllabus for Girls' Schools.

11. The Special Committee are indebted to the Rev. J. F. Hewitt, Professor Mahalanabis, and Rai Chuni Lal Bose Bahadur for the hygiene syllabus for boys' schools, and to Miss Brock for the hygiene and domestic economy syllabus for girls' schools. These subjects will be taken as part of the science course, to which two hours a week will be devoted, as indicated in the last paragraph.

The History and Geography Syllabuses.

12. The Special Committee are chiefly indebted for these syllabuses to Messrs. J. N. Das Gupta and Arden Wood, respectively. Two hours a week will be devoted to each of these subjects.

The Drawing Syllabus.

13. The Special Committee are indebted for this syllabus to Miss Brock, Miss Dyson and Miss White. Two hours a week will be devoted to this subject.

The Geometrical Drawing and Experimental Geometry Syllabus.

14. The Special Committee are indebted to Mr. Küchler for this syllabus. This subject will be taken in schools for boys only, and one hour a week will be devoted to it.

The Mensuration Syllabus.

15. The Special Committee are indebted to Mr. Küchler for this syllabus. This subject will be taken in middle vernacular and upper primary schools for boys only, and one and-a-half hours a week will be devoted to it in such schools.

* At a subsequent meeting of the Special Committee it was decided that physical science should not form part of the curriculum of schools at this stage. The syllabus will, therefore, contain three subjects, namely, natural phenomena, plant-life and animal-life.

Drill.

16. No syllabus is required. One hour a week will be devoted to this subject. This subject will be optional in girls' schools.

Manual Work.

17. This subject will be taken in middle vernacular and upper primary schools, and it will be optional. No syllabus will be prescribed for it, but work will be done according to any syllabus approved by the Inspector of the Division. If this subject is taken, three hours a week will be devoted to it.

The Needle-work Syllabus.

18. The Special Committee are indebted to Miss Brock, Sister Mary Victoria and Miss Dyson for this syllabus. In high and middle English schools for girls, seven, instead of eight, hours a week will be allotted to English, while geometrical drawing and experimental geometry will not be taken. The two hours thus set free will be assigned to needle-work in such schools. *

School Gardening.

19. The instructions given in the "Note on School Gardens," which is appended to the syllabuses for the infant section and standards I and II for both boys' and girls' schools, and of which a copy is given at the end of the syllabuses now submitted, will apply equally in the case of schools teaching standards III to VI.

List of Distribution of Hours.

20. I submit in the form of a statement a list of distribution of hours both for boys' and girls' schools according to the proposed syllabuses.

Preparation of Text-books.

21. There remains the question of the preparation of text-books for standards III to VI. Subject to further consideration on receipt of information on this subject, which has been sent for from the Bombay Presidency, the Special Committee, as at present advised, recommend that the only text-books which should be prepared at Government expense should be—

(a) three books in connexion with science,† viz.—(1) a book for standards III and IV in respect of subjects other than elementary physical science, (2) a similar book for standards V and VI, and (3) a book on elementary physical science for standards III to VI; and (b) a Senior Teacher's Manual.

As regards geography, the Special Committee recommend that the preparation of this book should be left open to competition; it being stipulated however that a translation of the book in English should be submitted for approval.

A. Earle,

Director of Public Instruction, Bengal.

The 20th June 1907.

* School authorities may, however, at their discretion devote the time allotted to drill in high and middle English schools for girls to needle-work. Similarly it will be at the discretion of school authorities to appropriate a protion of the time alloted to manual work in middle vernacular and upper primary schools for girls for needle-work on the understanding that drawing must not be included under the heading of manual work.

† At a subsequent meeting of the standards Committee it was decided that physical science should not form part of the curriculum of schools at this stage. Only two books will therefore now be required under (a) that is one for standards III and IV dealing with natural phenomena, plant-life and animal-life and a similar one for standards V and VI.

SYLLABUS OF STUDIES

FOR

STANDARDS III TO VI.

INTRODUCTION TO THE ENGLISH SYLLABUS.

THE object of teaching a foreign language to children at school—and to the great majority of Indian children in Bengal, English is a foreign language—is to put them in possession of that language. To possess a language, one must be able to understand it when spoken, and speak it so as to be understood, understand it when read, and read it so as to be understood, write it idiomatically and correctly, and, as a crowning accomplishment, translate it into the nearest possible equivalent, which the foreign language affords. Language is based on speech, and a child learns its mother-tongue by actual situations giving rise to actual wants and occasions of conversation.

2. The system which recognises those principles and bases its processes upon them is known as the direct method. This method insists that the foreign language should be acquired without the mediation of the mother-tongue. The pupil goes direct to the new language; hence the name. When an English word (e g., book) is spoken, the pupil connects the new word and the object without any intermediate step. It is with mental pictures, and not with the words of the mother-tongue, that the words of the language to be acquired have to be connected. A foreign language, according to the direct method, ought, in fact, to be learnt as nearly as possible in the same way as that in which a child acquires his own mother-tongue.

3. The adoption of the principles of the direct method means that in the future the guiding principle of the teaching of English to Indian children in Bengal must be the attempt to reproduce the process by which a child acquires its own mother-tongue. The acquisition of the power to speak the new language is the first and most important object, and no one can be said to speak a language unless he can pronounce it with the same degree of correctness. It is therefore of the greatest importance that the teacher should pronounce English correctly; he should speak slowly, and not be too easily satisfied with the pronunciation of his boys. During the first few lessons, the blackboard should be dispensed with, for many English words are not pronounced as they are written. Teaching must first be through the ear and the act of speaking. These are natural methods, for in its essence language is heard and spoken, not written and read.

4. So long as the general principles of the method are kept in view, the actual methods by which they are carried into practice may vary. The first practical step which follows from the acceptance of these principles is that an Indian child's first step in English must be within the range of his most familiar experience. The teacher should show familiar objects and name them. The objects must be grouped according to the initial sounds of their names (e.g., p. in pen, paper, pocket). The teacher pronounces the word slowly, and each pupil repeats it after him. He continues the campaign with sentences corresponding to actions on his part. The class sees what he is doing, and repeats the words after him. This soon leads on to question and answer, and before long conversations can be held with the class. In these stages, it is usual in actual practice to use the mother-tongue occasionally and as a short expedient for the purpose of making the meaning clear, but this procedure should be adopted to as limited an extent as possible. Repetition of phrases learnt should be habitually practised, and when they have become fixed in the pupils' minds, the teacher should note these phrases on the blackboard taking care to select those which are most familiar. After about the first twenty lessons, a portion of each lesson should be devoted to the learning of letters, say three at a time, from the blackboard. These should be copied by the pupils, and when the alphabet is known, words and sentences can be similarly treated, but special attention should be given to constant practice in individual speaking, and every lesson during the first few months should be, at least partly, a conversational one.

5. At first the lessons are incidental, but these should soon give place to systematic instruction. Individual children should be talked to about familiar things—themselves, their games, their surroundings, etc. Stories told to the class and afterwards re-told by the children, and talks to the children about unfamiliar objects and pictures to be afterwards reproduced by individual children should follow in due sequence. All through the series children must talk individually, and they should not only be taught to reproduce what the teacher says, they should also be encouraged to add ideas of their own. The greatest care should be taken to avoid any lesson degenerating into a mechanical process of question and answer. After a time this oral composition can be partly replaced by written composition.

6. During the latter half of the first year, reading should be started, the sentences read being equal in difficulty to those which are being used in the conversational lessons. Dictation, which chiefly aims at testing what has been learnt, readily follows a reading lesson. It should be especially noted that all the subjects in the English syllabus are related to each other, and that all are connected with, or follow directly from, the conversational lessons

7. As regards grammar, the principle on which the reformed method insists is that it should be taught through the actual use of forms learnt. Applying this principle to the method on the lines proposed, it will be easily apparent that it is not difficult to arrange the teaching in such a way that, while the pupil thinks that he is merely performing or seeing performed a series of actions, he will in reality be learning the chief forms of a verb. The pupil will thus from the first be learning his grammar by means of actions and objects. As soon as a number of similar forms have been understood, he may be made to classify them, and thus to obtain the main rules of conjugation and concord. These will henceforth be used as tests of grammatical accuracy to be applied to the English expressions of which a knowledge is gained through the senses. Classification under the direct method is the reproduction of the foreign expressions associated with sense experience, and this, of course, is done without the intervention of the mother-tongue.

8. It cannot be too strongly emphasised that, while the direct method recognises that grammar must be studied as something which will control and supplement expression, and not as something which can be considered apart from language, it does not ignore its importance, or even leave it to soak in of itself, as it does largely in the case of the mother-tongue. On the contrary, grammar teaching and grammar drill are really integral parts of the system. Even in the earliest stages of the method, the exercises should be so framed that the pupil may be gradually led to see that some system regulates and unites the words which he uses from day to day, and in this way the ground is prepared for a more formal study of grammar. It is easier to awaken a child's interest in sense than in grammar. It is easier to teach him correct expression by teaching him grammar through sense, than by teaching grammar first by itself (or rather through nonsense sentences) and then making him apply the rules learnt to sense.

9. We have in fact two pitfalls to avoid. On the one hand, the neglect of grammar teaching and grammar drill under the new system, and on the other hand, the continuance of the merely formal teaching of grammar which now prevails. The new ideal bids us teach grammar, as far as possible, in a concrete and living form. This is not merely for the purpose of "inducing" the laws of accidence and syntax, but above all - and this is the novelty—for the purpose of teaching before such induction the particular forms in detail and not for the purpose of drill after induction. It is evident that the habit of direct association must tend to make the application of the above laws instinctive from the beginning, for the direct association may enable the child to dispense with much of the analysis, which, according to the old method, was thought necessary before he could construct correct expression. It makes all the difference whether a child, when he wants to say "we are going" says "we," and spontaneously by direct association adds "are;" or whether he reasons as follows:—"We," personal pronoun, first person plural, therefore the verb must be in the plural form. It is not at all the same thing whether, when a child is told to put a story into the past as told by one of the actors in it, he calls up a mental picture of the whole thing as done by himself this day last week or a year ago, and then evokes a series of "I did," "I went," "I said" in answer to successive questions "what did I do then," or whether he reasons either in the mother-tongue or in English, "these verbs must be put into the past tense, because it is spoken narrative." In fact, the direct method introduces what amounts to a re-classification of the grammatical facts of language based on frequency of use, and even the inductions from these classifications should be presented at first, whenever possible, in concrete form.

10. The conclusions which seem to follow from these premises are:—(1) That in the elementary stage, the teacher must use as his instrument for teaching and driving home the main facts of grammar that which makes the deepest impression on the sense memory, viz., the process of describing actual objects or pictures of objects, and that of expressing actions actually performed, seen, foreseen, or remembered; (2) that later on, when the habit of calling up mental pictures has taken the place of the actual sense experience, and object-lessons and action series have given place to graduated short stories as the centre of study, these will be the vehicles for inculcating further essential points of grammar. These will thus, until they become part of the pupil's common, or so to speak automatic, stock of grammatical knowledge, be associated by a definite context, itself secured by direct association. Exercises for the practice of special grammatical points are indispensable, but they must be based on familiar material, so as never to lose the support of direct association and the element of reality. They must, moreover, be presented in the most concrete form possible. As an example of how this principle may be carried out in practice, it is suggested that to exercise a pupil in the rules of concord, he might be told to re-write a story with which he is well acquainted, as if there were two actors instead of one, or, as if the hero was a woman instead of a man, or, as if the hero was telling the story himself. The point to be emphasised with reference to such an exercise is that it presents itself to the pupil, not as a mere formal exercise in grammar, but as modification of the mind picture which the text calls up, a modification which demands another linguistic form. As such it has the invaluable advantage of combining the exercise of common sense with the application of grammatical tests. In such an exercise the pupil begins to feel a new power, for he is in some small measure creating.

11. The English readers which the reformed method requires present a problem of no small difficulty. In Germany where the direct method is followed most consistently, especially in connexion with the teaching of English, the great majority of the English readers in use aim at being distinctively English in every way. Their object is to bring before the minds of the children the actualities of English life According to these text-books the English lesson is not only to be conducted in English, but it is to be about England or something distinctly English. The very surroundings of the class-rooms are to be as English as possible, and great importance is attached to having the walls decorated with maps and pictures of England and things English. In India, however, the case is different. The majority of pupils will spend their lives in their own country, and when they learn English they are only conversant with Indian scenes. In these circumstances, the English readers must have an Indian setting, for the supreme test, as to whether a reader conforms to the spirit of the direct method or not, is the extent to which the matter which it contains is such that it can enter into the experience of the children, that they can visualise it. In the earliest stages of language study it is the sense experience which calls up the foreign expression connected with it. When it is necessary to transcend the limits of sense experience, the same principle holds good, only visualisation takes the place of actual sense experience. The acquisition of the foreign language is still the translation of experience into that language.

12. It remains to define the function of translation in the new system. Here again the root principle of the direct method must be applied, viz, that direct association is the all-important aim. The result of this application is clear. No translation exercise should be allowed which is not a "translation of experience." Translation should only be attempted of such English passages as the pupil understands in that language, and such tests are really exercises in the style of the mother-tongue. As such they should be made use of from an early stage, but not too frequently.

13. What has been said above applies to translation from English into the mother-tongue; but as regards translation from the mother-tongue into English, the same principle holds good, and the practical conclusion which follows from the application of the principle is that translation of this kind must not be attempted until the pupil has such a command of English that he would be able to produce the English version as a piece of original composition in that language. The process should be—(a) free composition, (b) re-translation, and (c) translation from the mother-tongue into English. Even re-translation should not be attempted too early. The habit of direct association, i.e., of thinking in English, must be firmly established in Indian children, or the presence of the words in the mother-tongue will interfere with the association.

THE ENGLISH SYLLABUS.

STANDARD III.

Conversational Lessons.—Every English lesson for the first half-year, and four lessons each week for the remaining part of the year, should be mainly conversational. The teacher should show familiar objects, and name them. Very easy conversations about familiar objects should be held.

Particular attention must be paid to pronunciation. When oral sentences are attempted, a portion of each lesson (e.g., the last ten minutes) should be set aside for writing English letters. In the first place written and printed small letters, and then written and printed capital letters, should be shown on the blackboard and copied by the pupils. Three letters might be taught at each lesson. As soon as the letters are known, words and sentences can be practised. Transcription is essential, and the words used in the conversational lessons should occasionally be dictated to the pupils, they being required to take them down.

Grammar.—No set lessons should be given in this standard. The province of grammar is to control and supplement expression. As such the teaching of grammar finds a place in the earliest conversational lessons, but that teaching must be incidental, and no definitions should be given. The earliest instruction should be arranged in such a way as to prepare for more formal teaching in the future. Some definite instruction however should be given at each lesson. The ground to be covered may be indicated as follows:—names connected with objects; ways of naming one thing and more than one thing; this and that, these and those, here and there, etc.; words of command; words showing action; present time, past time, future time; words which take the place of names; words describing objects; words which show relations of time, place and manner; connecting words; words of negation; questions and answers; numbers, 1—20.

Composition.—The greater part of the composition in this standard should be oral. In the latter part of the year, however, some written work should be done. The written work should follow naturally from the oral lessons. Sets of sentences which have been given orally should be written on a blackboard and copied by the pupils. At a later stage, the pupils should write three or four sentences at a time in their own words.

Reading.—A reader should be introduced during the second half of the year. The pupils will by then have done a certain amount of reading from the blackboard; and if the sentences from the reader are about equal in point of difficulty to those used in the conversational lessons, the transition should be easy. Special attention should be paid to pronunciation. Care should be taken to see that the pupils read intelligently and with deliberation. The reading should be clear and natural and not too loud. Constant questions on the subject-matter should be asked. The reader should contain 32 pages (exclusive of illustrations), of which 28 should be prose and 4 poetry.

STANDARD IV.

Conversational Lessons, Composition, Grammar and Writing.—At least five lessons each week should be given in connexion with these branches of the subject. New words should frequently be introduced, and the style of the conversational lessons should be varied, to include talks on familiar objects, the topics of the reading lessons, stories told by the teacher and re told by the class, etc. The form of many of these lessons will be decided by the grammar to be taught. This should include: the simple sentence; analysis of sentences into subject and predicate; forms of sentences; the noun, the verb, the adjective, the pronoun, the adverb and the preposition, and their uses in simple sentences; the joining together of simple sentences. Transcription and dictation should be continued on the same lines as formerly.

The written composition of this class should be very similar to, but more advanced than, that taught in Standard III. The use of capital letters, commas and fullstops should also be shown.

Reading and Recitation.—This should be practised at least twice a week throughout the year. It is desirable that each pupil should read individually once during the course of each lesson. The same methods should be used as in Standard III, but particular attention should now be paid to tone, manner, emphasis, accent and expression. The reader should contain 64 pages exclusive of illustrations (56 pages of prose and 8 pages of poetry); 40 lines of poetry should be learnt by heart.

Translation.—As an occasional exercise, the pupils should, under the guidance of the teacher, translate from English into the mother-tongue easy conversations, compositions, accounts of the topics of the reading lessons, etc. The pupils should not be asked to translate any passage, of which they have not thoroughly grasped the purport.

STANDARD V.

Conversational Lessons, Composition, Grammar and Writing.—Five lessons each week should be given in connexion with these branches of the subject. The teacher should now do less of the talking himself, and make the children do more. Sufficient subject-matter should be available from within the range of the pupils' experience, e.g, scenes which they have seen, descriptions of persons whom they know or of whom they have read, topics from their reading lessons, etc. It should be definitely recognised that the pupils' vocabulary should during this year be extended to include words expressing simple general qualities. It should at the same time be emphasised that these qualities should not be dealt with apart from the objects to which they can be referred, e.g., the quality of joy should not be treated apart from the person who feels it. The grammar which it is required to teach will, to a large extent, guide the course of the conversational lessons. Dictation and transcription from the black-board should be continued.

Original composition, which might, for example, take the form of making the class write six sentences on the subject of an oral lesson, should be continued. These compositions should be illustrative of the grammar lessons. Graduated stories should also be read aloud by the teacher, and by means of questions he should guide the boys to reproduce the substance of them. Subsequently, with the help of blackboard outlines, similar stories should be composed by the pupils.

Grammar should be continued in close connexion with the conversational lessons. The course should include: subject and predicate; number; person; gender; the agreement of subject and predicate; the object; tenses; voices; the moods of verbs; participles; the auxiliary verb; comparatives and superlatives; apposition; the interjection.

Reading and Recitation.—Three lessons a week should be given. The reader should contain 128 pages, exclusive of illustrations (116 pages of prose and 12 pages of poetry); 80 lines of poetry should be committed to memory. The questions asked on the subject-matter of the reading lessons should at this stage be of a more general nature; they should now aim at eliciting answers in the form of connected and continuous narrative.

Translation.—The practice of making the pupils translate into the mother-tongue English passages, the purport of which has been thoroughly grasped, should be continued. Translation from the mother-tongue into English should now be begun.

STANDARD VI.

Conversational Lessons, Composition, Grammar and Writing.—Four lessons each week should be given in connexion with these branches of the subject. More difficult sentences should now be used in the course of the conversational lessons, and they should be directly connected with the grammar teaching. The work should be based on the reader, on current events, on topics taken from the lessons on history and geography, etc. Dictation and transcription should be continued.

As regards composition, the work of the previous standard should be continued. Short composition exercises should now be given on subjects within the range of the pupils' experience. As a guide to these exercises, headings and outlines should be written on the blackboard. The elements of style should also be taught

The former grammar courses should be revised, and the following added:—The use of relative pronouns; subordinate clauses (adjectival, adverbial, noun); compound and complex sentences.

Reading and Recitation.—Three lessons should be given each week. The reader should contain 176 pages, exclusive of illustrations (160 pages of prose and 16 pages of poetry). The reading of the class should, however, not be confined to the reader. There should always be a school library, and the teacher should select English books from it for use on this class. The pupils should be encouraged to read good English books, and some idea of what literature means may be inculcated. One hundred and twenty lines of poetry should be committed to memory.

Translation.—Translation of simple sentences from English into the mother-tongue, and from the mother-tongue into English, should be regularly practised in this class.

INTRODUCTION TO THE VERNACULAR SYLLABUS.

THERE is a general complaint that the text-books in the vernacular at present prescribed for Standards III to VI are a little too difficult, especially for boys reading in High Schools. It cannot be said that the present books are more difficult than those read for the Upper Primary and Middle Scholarship examinations before the introduction of the new scheme of vernacular education. But in those days children in High Schools, who are generally of a lower age than those in the corresponding stages of Middle and Primary Schools, were not compelled to read the same text-books that were appointed for the latter. So far as secondary schools are concerned, Standard VI has long marked the end of vernacular education in this country; but under the new University Regulations, a considerable knowledge of the candidate's own vernacular will ere long be required for the Matriculation examination Standard VI, therefore, instead of being the finishing stroke of a student's knowledge of the vernacular, will now rank only as a stage in his onward progress, four years behind the matriculation goal. The time has come, therefore, when a somewhat less ambitious but more popular and efficient syllabus may be advantageously laid down for the lower forms, relegating the study of higher literature to the last four years of the High School curriculum.

2. Literature: how to be taught.—It is beyond the scope of the present note to deal exhaustively with this important subject, its proper place being in a treatise on the Art of Teaching. But a few hints for the consideration of teachers will not, it is hoped, be altogether out of place. The plan generally followed in this country is to make the class read the daily lesson, one by one, and ask the boys to give the meaning of words, which they do by means of synonyms often much more difficult than the original words themselves. The explanation of passages is equally unsatisfactory, the teachers and boys alike following the practice of simply substituting one word for another—a practice which has been hallowed by centuries of use in the elucidation of Sanskrit text. It has become the more inveterate owing to the extensive use of a host of very pernicious keys, the writers of which do not blush to offer sohila in explanation of jala (water) and briksha or taru in explanation of gachh (a tree).

The first steps towards reform, therefore, must be in the matter of explanation. It is not enough that the boy knows the synonyms for a word; he must know the thing itself, what it actually denotes and connotes. He may use ten words, if necessary, in explaining the meaning of a single word. In respect of sentences, too, no word-for-word substitution should be allowed, the chances being that both the teacher and pupil will use in such explanation words more unsuitable than those used by the author. Another method which may lead to the same end, and which is recommended for adoption, is to require the pupils to read a passage silently for a time and then to give its purport one by one.

Reading aloud also should be strictly attended to. It is often found in Indian schools that the boys, those of the upper forms not excepted, read very badly in a sort of whining sing-song tone without the least regard for stops and emphasis. The articulation should be clear and distinct and the tone natural, so that from the very manner of reading the meaning of the passage may be at once apparent. Recitation of good poems at least twice a week should be a regular part of school work.

3. Composition.—The reproduction of stories read out by the teacher from the text and other books should be continued up to Standard IV. In the oral work each boy should be required to reproduce the entire story, his fellow students being encouraged to challenge him whenever he deviates from the proper sequence of incidents or makes mistakes in grammar, idiom or pronunciation The written work may be either in the shape of a home task, or, what is decidedly better, a blackboard exercise, one boy being required to begin the story, another adding the next sentence, and so on till the whole is done, the work of correction going on simultaneously as in oral composition. Experience has shown that this system possesses an advantage over others, so far as children are concerned, as it calls forth a keen spirit of healthy rivalry, enables the teachers to detect mistakes at once and to point them out to the whole class and leaves little room for prompting or help from outside.

In Standards V and VI oral composition may be discontinued, and subjects, in dealing with which greater intelligence is needed, may be cautiously introduced. Natural phenomena, objects and animals described in the text-books or about which the boys may easily collect materials from ordinary books of reference, historical events and such simple abstract ideas as truth, honesty, kindness, kindness to animals, etc., may be selected as topics for composition. "The boys must be taught first to think carefully of the subject so as to see what are the questions and considerations to which it most naturally gives rise, and to be able to arrange what they have to say according to some definite plan. They should then write down the main heads, so that, as various ideas about it occur to the mind, they may be arranged, each under its own head. An outline thus drawn up will be a necessary preliminary to insure a logical and connected treatment of a subject, and to avoid needless repetitions or confused mingling of different views. The main division of the subject and the general facts appropriate to each having thus been written down, illustrations should next be collected. These may be noted down in brief to be enlarged and made complete when they are reached in the course of writing out the essay." For essays to be written at home, the boys should be directed to begin by filling in the outline, so that the subject may be dealt with more exhaustively than is possible at school where perhaps only half-an-hour or an hour at the most will be allowed for the purpose. At first, of course, the teacher himself will help the boys in drawing up the outline. Care should be taken that a separate paragraph is devoted to each head of the outline. Perspicuity and correct expression are the main points to be gained.

4. General.—Finally, it is necessary to point out that no boy can be expected to master the literature of his country, if he does not feel an interest in reading the books written by the best writers. The prescribed text-book, however carefully compiled, is but a small fragment of a great edifice, the whole of which the learner must be encouraged to look at and appreciate. The teacher, therefore, who rests satisfied with explaining the text-book only has but a very poor idea of his duty. He must create in his pupils a strong desire to read good books outside the school curriculum. He must have his library well stocked with such books and see them freely borrowed and perused by the boys, each according to his own capacity. The quantity of good juvenile literature is daily increasing, and with departmental help, may be further improved. A boy in Standard III will find the Kirthibasi Ramayan and Kasidasi Mahabharat at once interesting and instructive. Selected tales from the Arabian Nights, Æsop's Fables, the Hitopodesa and similar works will, it is certain, be appreciated by the pupils, if only they are brought to their notice and made accessible.

VERNACULAR SYLLABUS.

A.—STANDARDS III AND IV.

I.—The Reader.

1. The prose and verse reader will contain about 160 pages (double crown, 16 mo., in pica) and will be divided into two parts, thus :—the first part for Standard III with 65 pages of prose and 15 pages of poetry; the second part for Standard IV with 65 pages of prose and 15 pages of poetry.

2. The prose portion in each case to consist of—(i) character sketches from Indian History illustrative of such virtues as honesty, fidelity, and so on; (ii) short lives of famous men—chiefly Hindus, Muhammadans and Christians; (iii) moral tales; (iv) word pictures of historical and natural scenes or phenomena, such as some great famine, battle, cyclone, earthquake, a waterfall or a mountain scene; (v) natural history sketches relating to Indian fauna. Subjects (iv) and (v) will be given in Part II of the reader.

3. The poems should be such as are likely to appeal to the children's feelings, and impress upon them in the most striking manner the beauty of truth, honesty, self-sacrifice, devotion and other moral virtues. Those of a purely didactic nature would be the best suited to the purpose; but a good translation of Sanskrit and Persian verses which generally inculcate such virtues by metaphors or similes might be made use of to some extent.

4. The matter may be either original composition or extracts from standard writers. The latter course is especially recommended in the case of poetry.

5. The style throughout should be simple, chaste and terse, free alike from archaism and provincialism. It is not the difficulty of a word or words that makes a passage hard to understand, but the vague and abstract nature of the ideas. But all manner of bombast should be avoided, and not a word or sentence used which is not necessary. Paragraphing must be on a strictly logical basis.

6. Suggestive questions arising out of the subject-matter and grammar of the text, and on word-building, should be appended to each lesson. These need not be exhaustive, the object being merely to help the teacher in framing other similar questions himself.

II.—Grammar.

7. No text-book in grammar need be prescribed for Standard III, in which the aim should be to teach it inductively. The pupils should be taught the parts of speech—nouns, pronouns, adjectives and verbs. The teacher should begin with skeleton sentences showing the two essential parts, the subject and the predicate, and lead the pupils on to the noun and the verb. Later on the classification of nouns, adjectives and verbs, their inflection, and the elementary principles of forming compounds and of the combination of words, should be explained, and attention paid to the formation of different words from the same stem.

8. An elementary text-book in grammar of about 32 pages should be prepared for Standard IV, dealing with the subject inductively as before. It should begin with the structure of a sentence, and show how sentences are enlarged. It should then deal with grammar proper under the following heads:—

(a) Nouns.—Gender, Number, Case.
(b) Pronouns.
(c) Adjectives.—Comparison, adverbs, inflections for gender.
(d) Verbs.—Their classification, tense. Causative verbs.
(e) The Indeclinables. Combinations of sounds (Sandhi). Only the chief rules with familiar illustrations.
(f) The formation of compounds (Samasa); the elementary rules with familiar illustrations. The compounds to be explained on a logical plan.

9. At the Scholarship examination about one-fourth of the questions should be set from some simple unseen book or books. The passages set should be free from obscure allusions.

B.—STANDARDS V AND VI.

I.—The Reader.

10. The prose and verse reader will contain about 200 pages (double crown, 16 mo., in pica) and will be divided into two parts, thus:—the first part for Standard V with 75 pages of prose and 25 pages of poetry; the second part for Standard VI with 75 pages of prose and 25 pages of poetry.

11. The reader should be compiled much on the same lines as those recommended for Standards III and IV, but the range of subjects should be more varied.

II.—Grammar.

12. A text-book of about 60 or 70 pages, dealing with the subject more elaborately and including krit and tadhhit, will be prepared. The requirements of the vernacular should be steadily kept in view.

13. As in Standards III and IV, candidates for scholarships should be asked to explain unseen passages which may contain allusions such as they are expected to know from the prescribed text-books.

GENERAL REMARK REGARDING WRITING.

Ordinary hand-writing will be taught in all the standards (III to VI).

ADDITIONAL WRITING SYLLABUS FOR MIDDLE VERNACULAR AND UPPER PRIMARY SCHOOLS.

In middle vernacular and upper primary schools the following additional writing syllabus will be taught:—

Standard III.

Writing letters and applications to different persons in appropriate terms of address; páttás and kabuliyats.

Standard IV.

Writing of chittás, khasrás and khatiáns, simple bonds; jamákharach, postal forms.

Standard V.

Jamábandi, rokar, chálán, mahájani khasrá, rokar jamákharach, khatián hisáb-báki; rent receipts and other receipts.

Standard VI.

Zamindari shebá, thoká, different kinds of bonds and kabálás or deeds of sale, mortgage deeds, zamindári jamákharach, hundis.

INTRODUCTION TO THE ARITHMETIC SYLLABUS.

It is to be feared that the subject of Arithmetic, as a means of developing a child's reasoning power and making him mentally quick and alert, has been to a considerable extent lost sight of in the past, whereas in the hands of an intelligent teacher this subject ought to be one of the most powerful means in developing brain power in the young student. Hitherto arithmetic has largely consisted in learning mechanically abstract rules and in working out hosts of examples in accordance with those rules, and the only merit claimed for it has been that a child has acquired a certain skill in such mechanical exercises, and nothing more. As for the principles underlying the rules, these have been consistently neglected with the consequence that very few children to-day have the power to work out any but the very simplest problems. This is a regrettable fact. Let it be remembered that in after-life, the cases where a knowledge of Arithmetic is required are practically all problems.

Let the teacher therefore, in every lesson, remember that his object should be to teach the children how to think and reason. In view of this, let principles be explained, and as far as possible let the explanations come from the children themselves. As a help to this end, always begin with concrete examples, work from the concrete to the abstract, from the known to the unknown.

As soon as a principle is thoroughly grasped, begin with problems, at first mental, and then written. Let such problems in the early stage be simple, and then nicely graduated according to the capacities of the children, and specially take care that they have a reference to conditions of every-day life, thereby awakening an intelligent interest in the mind of the young student. Afterwards a number of examples should be worked to give the children accuracy and facility in manipulating the figures required by the rule. But let the teacher not forget that the main practical object of Arithmetic should be to enable the children to work out problems, and so let it be his chief aim to show his pupils how to tackle a problem intelligently, how to distinguish between necessary and superfluous data, and then how to write down the process, step by step, with care and accuracy. A child should have it impressed upon him that an examiner invariably assigns less credit to results than to the processes by which they are reached. Hence the importance of insisting from the beginning that the pupil should write down all the steps in the processes involved in any problem with the greatest neatness and accuracy. Too much stress cannot be laid upon this point.

Thus it will be seen from the principle laid down above that the old process called "The Rule of Three," which teaches a child merely how to arrive at a certain result without a thorough knowledge of the method by which it is obtained, is altogether unsatisfactory; nay, it is sometimes quite misleading, especially where problems based upon "Inverse Proportion" are concerned. In future the "Unitary method" should be adopted right through the school, for it is sound and safe and easily grasped by the least intelligent of the children.

In High schools, where English in the higher classes of the school is the medium of instruction, the question how soon English can be used by the children in working out problems or by the teacher in explaining principles and in the questions and problems to be worked, is an important one, but it must be decided largely by the teacher himself. One thing must not be forgotten: it is in the lower part of the school where the foundations of arithmetic are laid, and nothing must be done to imperil the firm and solid laying of those foundations. To use English at too early a stage will be a fatal mistake, as it will lead to slovenliness on the part of the children and will hamper them at every step. Still there is no reason why English figures should not be used from the lowest class, and thus the way will be paved for the adoption of English at a later stage.

SCIENCE SYLLABUS.

STANDARD III.

Natural phenomena.—Continually greater stress should be laid on the keeping of a calendar in which all observed natural phenomena should be recorded. Now that the children are supposed to have learned to write, they may be asked to bring written record of their individual observations. All such observations should be recorded, and possibly the name of the individual observer, in order to endow the calendar with particular interest. No effort should be spared to give it a permanent character, and it should be shown to, and initialled by, inspecting officers. Special attention should be given to meteorological conditions, and a school observatory might gradually be begun. The points of the compass must be discovered by observation of the sun. Each succeeding class must do this for itself independently, by erecting a vertical stick on a carefully-flattened and smoothed portion of the school compound, and marking the shadow of its end at different times of the day. Having thus discovered the south, the other points of the compass should be marked on the ground and named. Then the position of the sun at rising and setting must be marked down every day, or noted particularly once a week, so that its gradual seasonal change may be noted. The varying height of the sun at noon should also be observed and noted. Thus a sun-dial is constructed and its uses explained. When the apparent motions of the sun are thoroughly known, they may be contrasted with those of the moon whose regular study is however rendered difficult by its irregular hours, and it should perhaps only be attempted by school-masters who can arouse such enthusiasm that the children will volunteer to take turns at evening and early morning observations, and then relate the results to their class-fellows; these results should always be recorded in the calendar. The direction and force of the wind should be noted with the help of a streamer attached to a tall stick, and a locally-made rain-gauge kept, and the collected rain measured in the presence of the whole class. All these measurements—especially those connected with observations of the sun—will serve as practical illustrations of elementary geometrical drawing and measurement. Measurements of the length of straight and curved lines—every child being provided with a foot-ruler marked with scales of inches divided along one edge into 10ths and along the other into 16ths. Measurements of areas and volumes by every member of the class.

Plant Life.—The idea that plants are living objects should be impressed on the minds of the children.

Plants take food, they drink water, and they breathe air. They die when the supply of any of these is cut off. Sunlight is also essential to the life of plants. Green plants when deprived of light become pale and sickly, and eventually die.

Plants grow in size: some slowly, others very rapidly. Some attain enormous size; some are tall, while some are spreading; some creeping, while others are climbing.

Some plants live only for a season; some for two years, and others live for several years.

Animal life.—Difference between a vertebrate and an invertebrate animal, as illustrated by comparing the wings, legs and body of a bird with those of a butterfly. Animals without a backbone, as a snail, a bee, a milliped and a leech, compared with a fish.

Mode of life of ants and bees.

STANDARD IV.

Natural phenomena.—In Standard IV the class calendar should be maintained with increasing richness of detail. The observations of Standard III may be repeated with greater accuracy.

At the beginning of the rains a few cart-loads of earth (or sand where available) mixed with a few stones or bits of broken pots should be heaped up in a corner of the school compound and surrounded by a fence for protection. The gradual weathering of this heap of earth into landforms, mountains and valleys should be observed and noted, the actual work of denudation being specially watched during heavy rain, etc. The binding action of grass and other quick-growing plants in holding together portions of the clay should be noticed. Locally suitable variations and additions to this model landscape will occur to the individual teacher, and should be encouraged as circumstances require by individual inspecting officers. The action of rain and sun on roads, etc., should also be observed.

Plant life—stems.—Observe the different characters of the stem in trees, shrubs and herbs.

Note how buds arise in the axils of leaves.

Leaves.—Study colour, form and general characters of foliage-leaves.

Make a collection of leaves of familiar plants and examine their varied forms, etc; some are scented, some have a strong taste, some are smooth, others hairy. Some leaves are sensitive to touch, some close at night.

Flowers.—Study the colour, form and different parts of typical flowers. Sepals are usually green and form the protective part, while petals are usually of bright colours and form the most attractive part of flowers. Count the number of these structures in individual flowers.

Fruits.—Out of the flower comes the fruit, containing the seeds. The sepals and petals usually fall off when the fruit is formed. Some fruits are succulent, some hard, others box-like and let out seeds by opening. Seeds give rise to new plants.

Animal life.—External appearance and mode of life of tadpoles and frogs.

General characters of reptiles illustrated by simple descriptions of structure and mode of life of the crocodile, the tortoise and the snake.

General characters of birds.

The pigeon—a type of flying bird compared with a running bird, e g., the ostrich.

STANDARD V.

Natural phenomena.—A continuance of the calendar with still further increase of detail to be required from each child as home work, e.g., the clouds, their form, height and motion. Observations of the moon, its motions and phases. A simple model to illustrate the motions of the earth and moon round the sun may be constructed.

Plant life.—Life history of a plant:—

Examination of the parts of a seed.
Germination of seeds (e.g., matar or shim): study the behaviour of the radicle and the plumule.
Function of the cotyledons.
Growth of the seedling.
Examination of the parts of the seedling: root and shoot.
Functions of the root, stem and leaves.
Sources of food of ordinary plants—soil and air.
The mutual help of insects (e.g., ants) and plants.

Animal life.—Simple facts regarding general characters of mammals:—

External characters of some familiar examples of the order ungulate (hoofed animals)
The stomach of a goat laid open and examined—the four chambers—the construction of the stomach suited to the habits of the animals which chew the cud.
Dentition of a ruminant and a rodent compared.

STANDARD VI.

Natural phenomena.—The same as for Standard V, only in greater accuracy and detail. Some further planets and their satellites may be added to the model of the solar system. Climate and seasons of the year. Explanation of winds. The monsoon. Cyclonic storms.

Plant life.—Life history of plants:—

A more detailed study of the forms and functions of the root, stem and leaves.
How plants store up food for future use in (1) the stem, and (2) the root.
Breathing, transpiration and sleep of plants.
Parasites.
Dispersion of seeds through various agencies.
Insectivorous plants.
Mimicry among plants.

Animal life.—General characters of the order carnivora:—

External appearance and habits of familiar examples.
Arrangement of the teeth in the upper and lower jaws, respectively, of the cat—the prominent canines—a characteristic of the carnivora: the function of the incisor, the canine and the molar teeth explained.
Simple facts about the mode of life of bats.
Characteristics of monkeys and anthropoid apes.

INTRODUCTION TO THE HYGIENE SYLLABUS.

Advice to the Teacher.

Hygiene.

The teacher must remember that this subject taught merely from a text-book is so uninteresting as to be quite distasteful to many children. The only way to make it both interesting and useful is by pictures, or better still by actual objects and practice. Every lesson on hygiene should be an object lesson. Thus when teaching the duty of personal cleanliness, the teacher himself must be scrupulously clean, and must single out for rebuke any child who is not so. Thus gradually the idea of cleanliness will pervade his school. Or again the teacher cannot conscientiously teach that jungle should be cut down, stagnant pools filled in, and other necessary rules of the kind observed, unless his own house and school are models supporting his precepts. His best way of teaching the use of pure drinking water will be to construct a simple filter and insist on its use in school and its regular cleansing (vide sketch No. 2). All such dirty habits as spitting and hawking in school must be promptly stopped. The value of fresh air will be shown by a frequent opening of the windows; the duty of household cleanliness by keeping the school free from dust and cobwebs. The way in which well water is fouled can be shewn by a sketch (vide end of note, sketch No. 1). So also in such matters as the prevention of disease, the value of vaccination and inoculation will be best proved to his pupils by the master leading the way. He will carefully warn his pupils against foul water, unripe fruit, etc. He will do this in such a way as to encourage hopefulness, not provoke fear. In short, as far as may be, practice should always precede precept in this science, and the school-house and grounds should be the chief sphere for that practice.

N.B.—The work throughout these standards should be made as practical as possible. Hardly any value attaches to this subject, unless it is taken in a practical manner. This will only be possible in respect of all branches of the subject in boarding schools, but day schools may nevertheless do much in this way.

INTRODUCTION TO THE HISTORY SYLLABUS.

1. It has been remarked by a recent writer on school teaching in England that "a subject makes its strongest claims to a place in a school course, when it not only increases knowledge and exercises mental faculty, but when it stimulates interest in larger views of life and action and provides the continuance of that interest when the initiative of the teacher is withdrawn." If history deserves a place in our curriculum, it is because it does all this, and history teaching to be of any real value should not merely store the mind with useful information about the past, but stimulate the curiosity and arouse the imaginative faculty of the child and help him in taking an intelligent interest in the larger life around him.

2. In the earlier stages this can be best done by means of story-telling, making the child's mind play round imposing personalities and striking incidents. No text-book, however judiciously written, should or can by itself be enough at this stage. The necessary data, the essential facts and dates must, of course, be gathered from the text-book. But the teacher's voice, his manner, his method of exposition, his ready power of illustration, are all important factors in impressing things on the child's mind. It should never be forgotten that the primary function of the history teacher is to teach, and he should never be satisfied with setting lessons and hearing things recited or reproduced out of a text-book. In this connection the following passage from "Suggestions for the consideration of teachers," issued by the Board of Education in England in 1905, may suitably be quoted:—

"Important as it is to have a well-written and well-illustrated book to be used for the purpose of revising the oral lessons, and to some extent, as a text-book for preparation, no book, however good, can with children of this age, supply the place of vivid and vigorous personal teaching. It is from a judicious combination of stimulating oral teaching with the study of a book that the most fruitful results are to be obtained, and the book will help to give definiteness to the work which might otherwise become desultory and perfunctory. The reading aloud of a history book by the scholars, with occasional explanations by the teacher, is not a proper method of teaching history to children."

3. As a help to the choice of characters and events round which the teacher's effort should centre, and which should form the subject-matter of the prescribed text-book, the following points, about the importance of which there is a general agreement among practical teachers, may be quoted:—

(a) The child's mind is naturally more in sympathy with action than with contemplation or abstruse reflections.

(b) The undeveloped faculties of the child respond more readily to the simplicity of the earlier ages and the undeveloped forms of social organisation.

(c) The child's mind readily understands that which is familiar, and thus the familiar should be made the basis for teaching that which is remote and unfamiliar.

On these grounds, the text-book prescribed for Standards III and IV should be a History Reader about India, and not merely about the Province of Bengal.

4. In Standards III and IV, towards the end of the course, an attempt may be made to familiarise the child with some of those general abstract conceptions which form the subject-matter of higher history teaching; and here concrete illustrations may be made the means of instilling ideas about generalised conceptions. For example, the conception of kingship or of an empire may not be easily intelligible to the child, but the idea of a gracious Queen-Empress or of a mighty King-Emperor presiding over vast continents and taking a parental interest in the races committed to her or his charge is sure to appeal to the child's imagination, and will be readily grasped. Similarly, law, order, justice, government and citizenship are all difficult conceptions. But the village watchman, the police daroga, the village punchayet and the postman are all familiar figures, and may be used as aids to enable the child to realise the abstract conceptions.

5. History teaching, at least in the higher stages, should aim at training the judgment, strengthening the reasoning faculty and at giving us a living idea of our duties and responsibilities as citizens of a world-wide empire. Boys should learn to discriminate between good and evil as illustrated in the lives of the leading historical characters. They should also be taught the causal relation between facts; how misgovernment, for example, ends in general misery; how kindness breeds confidence; why a certain course of action fails, while another succeeds; how one ruler proves a builder of an empire, and how another sows the seeds of disruption. The result aimed at will best be secured by a detailed study of the British period of Indian history, because that period has a living and abiding interest for us all. The History Reader prescribed for Standards V and VI should, therefore, contain a detailed treatment of this period.

6. The following suggestions are made regarding historical apparatus, viz., text-book illustrations, maps, globes and atlases:—

(a) The text-book should always be explained and supplemented by the teachers

(b) The text-book should be intelligently illustrated, the illustrations throwing light on ancient customs, the remains of a nation's architecture, etc. In this connection, it may be noted that magic-lantern slides illustrating different epochs of English history are easily available and largely used in school in England Perhaps, similar slides for the teaching of Indian history may be prepared cheaply and without much difficulty.

(c) Maps and atlases should be constantly used, and, if possible, an attempt should be made to prepare and publish a historical atlas for Indian history on the lines of Gardiner's Historical Atlas. It may be mentioned that Gardiner's atlas already contains a few plates illustrative of Indian history,

INTRODUCTION OF THE GEOGRAPHY SYLLABUS.

1. Before dealing with the geography syllabus for Standards III to VI, in which, on an average, the pupils range in age from ten to thirteen years, it is necessary that we should realise what the geographical equipment of the pupils entering Standard III is, or is likely to be:—

(a) They will have been trained to observe, and, in a very elementary way, to associate causally some obvious features of their physical environments.
(b) They will have some practical acquaintance with standards: e.g., standards of time, distance, direction, area.
(c) They will have made a beginning of the work which leads to, as its goal, the intelligent reading of maps.
(d) They will know something of plants and animals; the differences between them, their differing habitats, and their uses.
(e) Some effect will have been given to geography as a correlating subject.

2. We have now to consider what will be the most vital parts of the work in the standards that follow, namely, III to VI. The subject-matter in these standards will be, in accordance with the most generally accepted views as to the treatment of the subject, "Home" geography, and the beginnings of "World" geography.

3. In these standards the pupils will at first be occupied with a stage of the subject ("Home" geography) in which it is possible for them to get their knowledge, or at any rate to have it illustrated, largely at first hand. The transition will then have to be made to the stage ("World" geography) in which they will have to make use of their imagination. They will have to apply standards, with which they will have become gradually familiar, and principles derived from a study of their immediate surroundings, to larger and larger areas, as to which their sources of information should mainly be the map. It follows that steady progress in the understanding and use of plans and maps is vital to the success of the work, and it is worth while to sacrifice a good deal to secure this. The work should be as practical as possible, and this will make it all the more suitable for pupils of this age, and the necessity of spending a good deal of time in acquiring some proficiency in the freehand drawing of outlines and in learning to make the conventional signs used on maps need not be regretted. Ample practice in noting directions, and in measuring and estimating distances will also be necessary. A true north and south line should be conspicuously marked somewhere in every school, and from the determination of the relative situation of such objects as are indicated in a plan of the school and play-ground advance may be made to the determination of the bearing of points in the immediate neighbourhood, both practically and from a large-scale map. And so to places further and further afield using maps of continually smaller scale, until the pupils are familiar with the bearings and distances away as determined from maps of the more important towns, and the prominent physical features of the province and of India.

4. The treatment of the subject should, as far as possible, be causal, but this method must not be pressed too hard; otherwise the pupils at this age will soon get out of their depth. It would, for example, be unwise to attempt any elaborate explanation of the cause of the seasons, or to enter in any detail into the proofs of the roundness of the earth. What is of far more importance is to continue such observational work as will prepare the way for the intelligent apprehension of the more difficult parts of the subject when the time comes to deal with them. With this end in view, observations should be made of such things as the place of sunrise and sunset at different times of the year, of the face of buildings that receive sunlight in the early morning at different times of the year, of how far sunlight reaches into a room at different times of day at different times of the year, and of the varying length of shadows at noon; and the association of these circumstances with higher or lower temperatures should be effected. Observations of wind direction should also be made and recorded. In such ways the required association between wind, weather and season will be brought about. When the time comes for it, it will be easy to connect travel northwards in our hemisphere with, as a rule, increasing cold, and travel southwards with, as a rule, increasing heat.

5. In many parts of Bengal a somewhat vigorous exercise of the imagination will be required to enable the pupils to realise the variety of relief on the earth's surface, and the effect of this variety upon scenery and the conditions of life Here pictures may be used with advantage, and, with some caution, the relief model, the relief map, and the relief globe. It will not be necessary at this stage to dwell on the evolution of scenery through the wear and tear of the land surface. It will be sufficient to draw attention to the existence of land waste, as evidenced by the muddiness of moving water after rain, and the way in which rivers in Bengal carve and change their channels. This part of the subject lends itself to easy illustration. A mound composed of a judicious mixture of clay, sand and ordinary soil will exhibit during the rainy season many of the most striking results of denudation.

6. A warning is perhaps still required against burdening the memories of these young pupils with lists of place-names and commodities. The number of names that it is really necessary to learn formally is quite few. A committee recently appointed for the purpose in America prepared the following list of cities in Europe that pupils at this stage should know:—London, Liverpool, Manchester, Edinburgh, Glasgow, Madrid, Berlin, Hamburg, Vienna, Rome, Naples, Athens, Constantinople, St. Petersburgh, Paris, Marseilles and Venice. A like economy should be exercised in memorising the names of other geographical features. With honest teaching, and with maps used as they should be, much knowledge of this kind will be acquired informally and in a more useful way.

7. The work throughout should be made as practical as possible.

GEOGRAPHY SYLLABUS.

Standard III.

1. (a) Measurement of distance by pacing. Representation of actual distances by lines drawn to scale, using familiar units, e.g., length of finger-joint to represent one pace. Change of scale, e.g., a distance in paces represented by a certain number of lengths of the finger-joint should be expressed in feet and represented by inches or fractions of an inch. Practice in reading plans drawn to scale.

(b) Plans of school-room on various scales should be drawn on the black board by the teacher, the measurements being supplied by the children. The children should copy the plans drawn by the teacher, on a suitably reduced scale, using marked rulers. Plan of school block and playground made to scale from measurements taken by the children.

(c) Out-of-door lessons on direction, and the approximate determination on points of the compass by the observation of the position of the sun at different times of the day.

(d) Schools walks, in which attention is drawn to the chief physical features of the neighbourhood, should be occasionally taken. The terms used to denote the physical features observed; e.g., maidan, plain; nullah, river; jungle, forest; coast, bank; river-mouth, tributary, channel, etc., should be more fully explained in the class-room, and illustrated by means of sand or clay. The way in which these surface features are represented on a map should be explained and illustrated.

2. (a) The pupils will now be able to understand descriptive lessons given from the map on the geography of the country outside their own immediate neighbourhood, the nearest river or stream (where does it come from ? where does it go to ?), a high road, or other suitable surface feature of the locality being used to connect the home district with neighbouring districts. Such descriptive lessons may be extended until the whole province has been covered, and a clear idea of the leading physical features of Bengal as a whole has been reached.

(b) The chief occupations of the people, and how they vary to some extent in different parts of the province, e.g., on the sea coast, in the hills, in the mining districts. A few simple lessons on what men need in the way of food, clothing, etc., and how these needs are supplied, may lead the pupil to understand why people live together in hamlets, villages, and towns. The chief towns of Bengal and their situation. Calcutta described as a capital, port, and trading centre.

(c) The position of Bengal in relation to the Bay of Bengal, the adjoining provinces, and India as a whole, should be explained, using both the map and the globe.

3. where the lesson is given to Calcutta, from Calcutta to Darjeeling, from Calcutta to Delhi, from Calcutta to Madras, etc. How salt is obtained from sea water on the coast; the falls of the Kaveri; the coal mines of Raniganj; description of Indian cities, such as Benares, Nagpur, Madras, Bombay, Lucknow, etc. A few lessons describing incidents of travel or adventure abroad, e.g., whale fishing, an American cotton plantation, the Pyramids of Egypt, the land of the midnight sun, an eruption of Vesuvius, an avalanche in the Alps, a prairie fire.

(b) Practice in reading simple physical maps. Blank maps, in particular of Asia and Europe, to be filled in by inserting only the principal mountains, rivers, and towns, and by naming the most important coast features and arms of the sea.

Frequent sketch maps as revision work, specially in connexion with the definitions of geographical terms and the representation on maps of the most important surface features.

(c) The work of rivers in carving their channels, and in transporting land waste.

2. Eurasia treated very generally. Its situation in relation to the other great land masses of the world. The great lowlands and the great highlands taught from the map in connexion with the main river basins. The greater coast features, and seas. General comparison of the climate of different regions. The characteristic vegetation and animals. The main political divisions, and the peoples inhabiting them.

Standard VI.

1. (a) The latitude and longitude circles on a globe, with easy exercises, such as naming the latitude and longitude of places marked on the globe, naming the countries crossed by a particular parallel or meridian, and naming places on or near the same parallel or meridian.

The area of Britain should be roughly compared with the area of its greater colonies and dependencies, and the distances of these from Britain measured on the globe.

(b) Further work and revision of previous work in the explanation and illustration of the more important features of land and water.

(c) Elementary notions of climate. Comparison of Bengal with other parts of India as regards temperature and rainfall at different times of year.

(d) The blank maps of Africa, Australia, North America, and South America to be filled in as indicated under Standard V, with special attention to the parts that are British or under British influence.

2. Africa, Australia, North America, and South America treated very generally but with more particular reference to the parts that are British or under British influence. The main surface features and coast features should be taught from the map.

The British Isles from the map in some general way, but with more particular attention to England. General comparison of Britain, its climate and population, with those of its chief colonies and dependencies.

N.B.—Chalk drawings at this stage may be discontinued, if desired.

Standard IV.

(i) The drawings from natural objects to be still continued, but studies of single leaves and flowers are too elementary at this stage. Such studies as the following are suitable: branch bearing leaves and flowers or leaves and fruit; a cluster of flowers, etc.

(ii) Very simple ornamental designs from the flat. A dozen copies to be chosen from the first-grade South Kensington series.

STANDARD V.

(i) Elementary study of perspective. The drawing of solid objects of rectangular, cylindrical, conical, and other forms. These should be very simple at first. Positions of objects relative to the eye level should be varied from time to time. Objects should be represented in their natural positions above or below the eye level. (Examples boxes, books, almirah, foot-stool or mora, paper basket, punkah, etc.)

(ii) Drawing from ornamental designs.

Experimental verification of simple geometrical theorems arising out of the constructions, e.g., "two sides of a triangle are greater than the third."

Apparatus required: a pair of pencil compasses, 6" foot-rule, India-rubber, set scale, pencil. The whole may be obtained in its cheapest form for about 4 annas. A divider point, to be used with the compasses, is desirable, but not necessary. The teacher should possess a good pen-knife, so that the pencils used by the boys can be sharpened to a fine point.

NOTE ON SCHOOL GARDENS.

IN connection with the study of plant life, the importance of which has been insisted upon in the syllabus, the provision of school gardens should be considered as most desirable. Where a garden is impossible, plants should be grown in boxes or pots. The attention of school managers, teachers and others is invited to the following extract from some remarks on school gardens made by Mr. F. G. Sly, Officiating Inspector-General of Agriculture in India:—

"The master must use real objects, in order to cultivate in the child the habits of observing and thinking. In this matter, school gardens are of primary importance. I recognize the difficulties that in some parts stand in the way of providing each rural school with a garden, but these might be overcome more often than they are. Where this is impossible, a very great deal can be accomplished by growing plants in boxes and pots. The right use of a school garden or school pots is not always enforced. I have seen school gardens in which the whole of the work was done by the school watchman, and which served the sole purpose of growing a few English vegetables for presentation to an inspecting officer. The best school gardens visited by me served the useful purposes of beautifying the school surroundings and of giving some manual training to the children, but even these objects are of secondary importance. The real object of a school garden should be to supply materials for object-lessons in which the pupils can study the growth of plants. It should be a garden where 'nature is studied in its relations to the child, from the child's standpoint by the teacher with the children.' If there is not room for each child to grow his own patch, each class should jointly cultivate its own plot, not in order to produce the best results, but to observe and study plant growth. Under the guidance of the teacher, the child should observe the parts of a seed, the plant food in it, the process of germination and the conditions necessary for it. In each stage of the growth of the plant he should pull up a specimen and observe the roots, their uses and their growth; the stems, their uses and structure; the leaves, their uses and structure; the flowers, their parts and uses, and methods of fertilization, the fruits and seeds; their formation and uses, methods of disposal and the like. He should observe the soil and its composition, the effect of plant food and manures. The gardens should be deliberately used to give object-lessons in failures as well as in success in connection with soils, drainage, manures, weeds, and the like. School gardens need by no means be expensive; a portion of the school compound can often be utilized, and the commonest seeds obtained free in the village are as useful as those purchased from a merchant. In any case, the cost of growing some plants in pots and boxes is infinitesimal. Plants collected from the roadside and cultivator's field can never take the place of a school garden. The child must do the things himself; he must sow his own seed and observe the growth of his own plants."

Cultivation has been facilitated and prospects of standing crops have improved, but some damage has been done to the rabi crops on threshing-floors in Saran and Champaran. A storm did some damage in Angul. Sowing of jute and other bhadoi crops has commenced. The sugarcane crop and vegetables are doing well. The price of common rice has risen in Burdwan, the 24-Parganas, Nadia, Murshidabad, Gaya, Champaran, Bhagalpur, the Sonthal Parganas and Balasore, has fallen in Birbhum, Howrah, Jessore, Hazaribagh and Singhbhum and has been stationary in the remaining districts. Cattle-disease is reported from Midnapore, Nadia, Murshidabad, Jessore, Patna, Gaya, Muzaffarpur, Darbhanga, Monghyr, Bhagalpur, Purnea, Puri, Sambalpur, Ranchi and Palamau. The recent rain has greatly improved the water-supply. Insufficiency of fodder and water is, however, still reported in parts of Jessore, Gaya and Monghyr. The number of persons on test-works in Muzaffarpur and Bhagalpur was 2,351 and the famine relief-works in Darbhanga were attended by 49,474 persons. Gratuitous relief was given to 33,442 persons in Muzaffarpur, Darbhanga, Bhagalpur, Purnea, Puri and Palamau.

The mean pressure, temperature, etc., are deduced from eye observations.

The maximum and minimum temperatures are obtained from self-registering thermometers. All the thermometers are verified, and the readings have been corrected to a standard constructed and verified at the Kew Observatory. They are exposed under a thatched shed open at the sides, and are suspended four feet above the ground.

The barometer readings are corrected to those of the standard, Newman's No. 86, formerly at the Surveyor-General's Office.

The hygrometric elements are obtained from Tables III, IV and V of the official tables computed in the Meteorological Office and based on Regnault's modifications of August's formula.

The directions and the movement of the wind are taken from the trace of a Beckley's anemograph.

The mouth of the rain-gauge is one foot above the ground. The rainfall reported on any day is for 24 hours preceding 8 A.M. of that day.

o, overcast; g, dark gloomy; d, drizzling rain; p, passing temporary showers; t, thunder; <, Lightning; /, strong wind; K, thunder storm.

J. G. CUMMING,
Offg. Secy. to the Govt. of Bengal.

No. 2896—2908—44, dated Simla, the 22nd April 1909.

RESOLUTION—By the Govt. of India, Department of Commerce and Industry.

THE following translation of an order passed by the Governor of German New Guinea, respecting the immigration and introduction of non-indigenous natives into the Protectorate of German New Guinea is published for general information:—

TRANSLATION.

Order of November 1st, 1908.

In virtue of section 15, of the Protectorate Law (Reichs-Gesetzblatt, 1900, page 813) and of the Imperial Chancellor's Decree of September 27th, 1903 (Deutsches Kolonialblatt, 1903, page 509), the following is decreed for the Protectorate of German New Guinea.

SECTION 1.

Non-indigenous natives may only immigrate or be introduced into the Protectorate of German New Guinea by the ports that are open to foreign traffic.

Anyone who wishes to introduce such natives under a definite labour contract otherwise than by the ports that are open to foreign traffic, must obtain the written permission of the registration authorities (Meldebehorde) of the port of entry.

Ship-masters must present to the registration authorities of the port of entry a list of the non-indigenous natives to be landed there.

SECTION 2.

Every non-indigenous native immigrating into the Protectorate must within 3 days after landing report himself to the Authorities of the port and make a statement for purposes of identification. Thereupon a certificate will be given to him.

The authorities may order a medical inspection.

If a person who is under the obligation to report himself leaves the protectorate or changes his domicile within the Protectorate from one district to another, he must announce his arrival and departure in the same manner.

SECTION 3.

Whoever in the Protectorate introduces non-indigenous natives under a definite labour contract is bound to deliver to the authorities within 3 days from the landing a copy of the contract and a list of names in duplicate. If there is no labour contract, one must be drawn up before the authorities of the port of landing.

The obligation of making an announcement to the authorities of the place where the work is carried out takes effect in the same manner on the renewal or prolongation of an existing arrangement or contract for working. The authorities may order the native to appear personally and be medically examined.

The costs of the examination and reception of needy or sick persons into an institution are borne by the employer and not by the official authorities.

The workmen introduced may only be employed after the facts of their having reported themselves and being fit to work have been certified on the second copy of the list of names.

SECTION 4.

The authorities must supervise the arrangements for working and must especially examine the lodging, provisioning, medical attendance and wages of the workmen. The authorities have the right to undertake inspections or to order inspections to be made by suitable experts or by a committee, and to take steps to remove evils. Should the inspection show that the employer is not fulfilling his obligations, he must bear the costs of such inspection.

SECTION 5.

On the authorities' demand the employer is bound on the termination of the labour contract to send the workmen back to the place where they were engaged, or to pay the costs of the return. This obligation is cancelled after the space of one year from the termination of the arrangement.

The employer is obliged to announce to the authorities the termination of the arrangement and the return of the workmen to their home, and he is obliged to give information on demand concerning each workman in his service.

The authorities may order a medical examination of the workmen to be sent home to be made at the cost of the emplyer.

SECTION 6.

Any workman who after the conclusion of his working arrangement with the employer still remains in the Protectorate, is bound to report himself in accordance with Section 2 to the competent authority for his place of residence.

SECTION 7.

The authorities to whom such reports must be made are the Imperial District Offices and Stations for their Districts.

SECTION 8.

A fee for these declarations is to be paid for each person in accordance with Section 3 ; it amounts to 10 Marks in the old Protectorate, 20 Marks in the Island Territory and 30 Marks in case the contract lasts longer than 2 years.

If a labour contract or agreement is renewed or prolonged, the same fees are charged.

SECTION 9.

Infringements of the provisions of this Order are punished by a fine not exceeding 600 Marks or by imprisonment for a period not exceeding 3 months.

SECTION 10.

This Order comes into force on April 1st, 1909.

The non-indigenous natives already settled in the Protectorate on that day are bound to report themselves in accordance with Section 2 within a space of 3 months; in accordance with Section 3 the employers must, within the same period, report the names of the workmen in their service on the day when the Order comes into force.

SECTION 11.

On the day when this Order comes into force the following will be cancelled.

The Order of the Governor of German New Guinea of February 1st, 1904, concerning the immigration and introduction of Chinese into the Protectorate of German New Guinea with the exception of the Island Territory of the Carolines, Pelew and Mariannes (Deutsches Kolonialblatt, 1904, page 253) and the provisions for carrying out this Order, of February 1st, 1904, also the change in the Order regarding the engagement and introduction of coloured workmen of January 20th, 1907. LIBERALITY OF BABUS HEM CHANDRA BOSE AND JOTISH CHANDRA BOSE.

No. 69T.—Medl., dated Darjeeling, the 27th April 1909.

From—H. WHEELER, Esq., Offg. Secy. to the Govt. of Bengal, Municipal Dept.,
To—The Inspector-General of Civil Hospitals, Bengal.

THE Lieutenant-Governor has been informed that Babus Hem Chandra Bose and Jotish Chandra Bose, M.A., B.L., of 24, Roy Bagan Street, Calcutta, have made a donation of Rs. 10,000 in ten 4 per cent. Municipal Debentures of Rs. 1,000 each, yielding a half-yearly income of Rs. 200 which they have deposited with the Superintendent of the Campbell Medical School and Hospital, Sealdah, for the creation of a fund, to be called the "Basanta Bose's Fund" in memory of their brother, the late Babu Basanta Kumar Bose, Solicitor of the High Court, for the relief of pauper patients discharged from the Campbell Hospital. The intention of the donors is that the interest derived from the debentures should be devoted to providing as many pauper patients as the income will allow, on discharge from the Hospital, with diet-money for four days at the rate of four annas a day, the Superintendent of the Campbell Hospital being empowered to raise the allowance at his discretion, in cases of extreme distress.

2. I am to request that you will be so good as to convey to the donors through the Superintendent of the Campbell Medical School and Hospital, the cordial acknowledgments of Government for their liberality and public spirit. The money should be deposited with the Accountant-General, Bengal, and a trust fund should be created with it, to be called the "Basanta Bose's Fund" for the purpose of providing diet-money to pauper patients on their discharge from the Campbell Hospital, the Superintendent of the Campbell Hospital being appointed the administrator of the Fund.

3. The Accountant-General, Bengal, will be asked to take the necessary steps to give effect to these orders.

RESOLUTION ON THE HOWRAH BRIDGE BUDGET ESTIMATE FOR THE YEAR 1909-1910.

No. 1005Marine.

Government of Bengal.

MARINE DEPARTMENT.

Dated Calcutta, the 28th April 1909.

RESOLUTION.

Howrah Bridge Budget Estimate for the year 1909-1910.

READ—

Letter No. 12329, dated the 31st March 1909, from the Vice-Chairman of the Commissioners for the Port of Calcutta, submitting the Budget Estimate of the Howrah Bridge for the year 1909-1910.

RECEIPTS.

The receipts for the year 1909-1910 have been estimated at Rs. 2,30,600, against Rs. 2,34,000 the estimated receipts of the previous year. The decrease in the estimate is due to no provision having been made under the head "Contribution from Port Trust for use of the Helvetia," the vessel having been sold, and also to a diminution under "Miscellaneous receipts."

EXPENDITURE.

The expenditure has been estimated at Rs. 2,14,635, against Rs. 2,18,600 the estimate of the previous year. The decrease is chiefly under the heads "Establishment" and "Stores."

As a net result there is an estimated surplus of Rs. 15,965.

The Lieutenant-Governor sanctions the estimate under section 21 of Act IX (B.C.) of 1871.

By order of the Lieutenant-Governor of Bengal,

WIDENING OF CHOWRINGHEE ROAD.

No. 475M.P.I.

Government of Bengal.

PUBLIC WORKS DEPARTMENT.

M:s. Pub. Impvts.

Dated Calcutta, the 4th May 1909.

RESOLUTION.

The Lieutenant-Governor has had under his consideration a proposal, put forward by the Calcutta Corporation, for widening Chowringhee Road between the western end of Theatre Road and Lower Circular Road, as part of a larger scheme for widening the main southern thoroughfare which follows the line by Chowringhee and Russa Roads, between Theatre Road and Elgin Road. At present the total width of Chowringhee Road at Theatre Road junction is 66 feet, but south of that point it narrows considerably, and is reduced to about 39 feet at the crossing of Lower Circular Road. The width between the kerbstone of the eastern footpath of Chowringhee and the near tram line varies from 48 feet at Theatre Road to about 16 feet at Lower Circular Road.

It is proposed to widen the road to a uniform breadth of 66 feet right through to the Lower Circular Road crossing, and this will be effected by taking in from the Maidan a narrow strip of land measuring about 27 feet at the Circular Road crossing, and tapering away to nil at Theatre Road. The area to be taken in measures about one bigha in extent.

Eventually it is in contemplation to move the tram lines to the western edge of the new roadway, so as to give to ordinary traffic the full benefit of the increased width thus obtained. This, however, cannot be done at present, because of the large sum, estimated at about Rs. 27,500, claimed by the Tramway Company for shifting this portion of their line, a sum which neither the Local Government nor the Corporation feel justified in paying.

Even, however, without this transfer, it seems clear that the widening of the road and its adjustment to the level of the tram lines will afford substantial additional facilities for traffic.

Any encroachment on the Maidan, however trifling, is a matter of so much moment to the residents of Calcutta that the Lieutenant-Governor does not feel justified in proceeding with the project until the public have had an opportunity of expressing their views upon it. No action will therefore be taken for two months from this date, and within that period any person who may desire to make any representation on the subject is invited to do so.

By order of the Lieutenant-Governor of Bengal,

A. S. THOMSON,

Secretary.

PRELIMINARY FORECAST OF THE EARLY VARIETY OF THE SESAMUM CROP OF BENGAL FOR THE YEAR 1909.

THE following note is published for general information.

F. W. DUKE,
Offg. Chief Secy. to the Govt. of Bengal.

The 3rd May 1909.

DEPARTMENT OF AGRICULTURE, BENGAL.

PRELIMINARY FORECAST OF THE EARLY VARIETY OF THE SESAMUM CROP OF BENGAL FOR THE YEAR 1909.

[On an average of the five years ending 1906-07, the area under til in the territory to which this forecast relates has represented some 5·9 per cent. of the total area under this crop in British India.]

Explanatory.—This forecast deals with the preliminary estimates of the area and outturn of the early variety of the crop.

Character of the season.—Of the 24 districts in which the crop is cultivated Midnapore, Angul, Manbhum, Singhbhum, Jessore, Shahabad and Burdwan are most important. Sowings of this variety have been completed in the following nine districts :—Burdwan, Birbhum, Bankura, Midnapore, Howrah, Khulna, Saran, Puri and Manbhum. In the remaining districts sowings have been retarded through want of rain. The prospects of the crop are fair in these nine districts except in Birbhum and Howrah.

Area sown.—The area sown with the crop in the nine districts mentioned above amounts to 25,300 acres. The normal area in these districts is estimated at 29,000 acres. The full report on the general condition of the crop for the Province will be given in the second forecast which will be published in August next.

W. R. GOURLAY,
Offg. Director of Agriculture, Bengal.

REPORT ON THE BRUCE INSTITUTION FOR THE YEAR 1908.

NOTIFICATION.

No. 245T.G.—The 29th April 1909.—The following is published for general information.

J. G. CUMMING,
Offg. Secy. to the Govt. of Bengal.

Report on the Bruce Institution for the year 1908.

I. Control.—(1) During the year under review Mr. A. Earle, C.I.E., Director of Public Instruction and ex-officio Governor and Honorary Secretary, Bruce Institution, was appointed Commissioner of the Patna Division, and was succeeded by Mr. G. W. Küchler.

(2) The following gentlemen were appointed to be Governors during the year:—

(a) Sir D. M. Hamilton, Kt., vice Mr. T. McMorran, resigned.

(b) The Revd. D. H. Manley, vice the Revd. Titus Lowe, resigned.

(3) The following is a list of the Governors holding office at the close of the year:—

The Hon'ble the Chief Justice of Bengal,
The Most Revd. the Lord Bishop of Calcutta,
The Chairman of the Calcutta Municipality,
The Inspector-General of Civil Hospitals,
The Director of Public Instruction (Honorary Secretary), } Ex-officio.

The Hon'ble Mr. Justice Brett, C.S.I.
Sir D. M. Hamilton, Kt.
E. Upton, Esq., Barrister-at-law.
The Ven'ble Archdeacon Luckman
The Revd. Father A. Van de Mergel, S.J.
The Revd. D. H. Manley.
N. L. Hallward, Esq.

II. Capital and Income.—The capital of the Institution stood, as in the previous year, at Rs. 10,51,200, of which Rs. 10,46,200 are in the form of a 3½ per cent. stock certificate of the year 1865. The balance, viz., Rs. 5,000, is invested in 3½ per cent. Government Securities. The annual interest on the capital amounts to Rs. 36,792. The year opened with a balance of Rs. 19,628-4-1 and closed with a balance of Rs. 925-8-10. The reason why the closing balance was unusually small is that the second half-yearly interest of Rs. 18,396 for the year, which is generally received in December, was not received till January 1909.

III. Election to vacancies, etc.—(1) The annual election of foundationers was held in the month of January as usual. For the 12 vacancies advertised 47 applications were received, but four vacancies having subsequently occurred, 16 girls were elected on the recommendation of a sub-committee consisting of the Ven'ble Archdeacon Luckman, the Revd. Father A. Van de Mergel, the Revd. D. H. Manley and Mr. N. L. Hallward. Of the girls elected seven were placed in the Loreto Convent, Entally (six in the boarding school and one in the orphanage), seven in the Calcutta Girls' High School, one in the Pratt Memorial School and one St. Paul's Mission Home.

(2) Of the 12 girls who were withdrawn during the year, nine had attained the age of 17 years, the limit ordinarily allowed under the rules; two were withdrawn before they had attained that age and one girl died.

(3) Of the girls who were withdrawn and in respect of whom reports have been received, one passed the Entrance Examination of the Calcutta University and has joined the Training College for Teachers at Kurseong, another is learning shorthand, type-writing, needle work and home nursing, another is learning shorthand and type-writing, while two others intend doing the same. Another girl, after her withdrawal from the Bruce Fund, has been kept on in the school where she was educated and endeavours are being made by the school authorities to find her a suitable employment.

At the close of the year, there were 142 girls on the foundation against 144 in the preceding year. They were distributed as follows:—

Loreto Convent, Entally—
Boarding School			31	60
Orphanage			29
Calcutta Girls' High School				41
Pratt Memorial School				15
La Martinière for Girls				9
St. Paul's Mission Home				7
Calcutta Free School				6
Old Church Parochial Home				3
Girls' High School, Allahabad				1
				142

(4) The following table affords particulars as to the class and religion of the girls on the foundation at the close of the year:—

Class.	Roman Catholics.	Church of England.	Non-Conformists.	Total.
1. Orphans, or deserted by parents ...	20	10	13	43
2. Fatherless, or deserted by their fathers, or those whose fathers were incapable.	40	26	20	86
9. Having father or both parents alive.	2	4	7	13
Total ...	62	40	40	142

IV. Education and maintenance.—(1) The nature of the education imparted to the girls on the foundation is generally that prescribed for Primary and Middle Schools for Europeans. In exceptional cases a higher education is given.

Parents and guardians are generally given the choice of any school for the education of their children or wards, provided that such a school has been approved by Government as suitable. A sum of Rs. 21-8 or Rs. 16 a month is paid for the education and maintenance of each foundationer in a boarding school or an orphanage, as the case may be. The question of the revision of these allowances in view of the dearness of provisions is still engaging the attention of the Governors. A sum of Rs. 40 or of Rs. 25 is also allowed for each foundationer for an outfit on joining a boarding school or an orphanage, as the case may be. Under the rules a girl is not ordinarily allowed to remain on the fund after she has attained the age of 17 years, when an outfit grant of Rs. 50 is given to enable her to make a start in life. If, however, a girl elects to take up teaching as a profession, an extension is generally allowed. One such extension was granted during the year. Short extensions not exceeding a few months, are also allowed to enable foundationers to appear at the examinations prescribed under the Code of Regulations for European Schools or at the Cambridge Local Examinations. One such extension was granted during the year. Another girl, who is an orphan, was granted a short extension up to the end of the year to enable the school authorities to find her some suitable employment.

(2) The average monthly cost of the education and maintenance of each girl on the fund amounted to Rs. 19-3-9 as against Rs. 19-5-3 in the preceding year.

(3) The total amount paid under the different heads of expenditure was—

1907.	Rs.	A.	P.	1908.	Rs.	A.	P.
Education and maintenance	34,629	4	0	Education and maintenance	34,829	0	0

Total ...	37,492	8	8	Total ...	37,140	6	11

V. Inspection.—Mr. N. L. Hallward was appointed Visiting-Governor for the first half, and the Revd. D. H. Manley for the second half, of the year. Their reports on the whole were satisfactory.

VI. Meetings of the Governors.—Four meetings were held during the year, and among the various resolutions passed the following may be noted :—

That, where possible, wards should be sent to schools outside Calcutta and that the Governors should avail themselves of St. Andrew's Colonial Homes, Kalimpong, and the Protestant European Orphanage, Cuttack.

The mean pressure, temperature, etc., are deduced from eye observations.

The maximum and minimum temperatures are obtained from self-registering thermometers. All the thermometers are verified, and the readings have been corrected to a standard constructed and verified at the Kew Observatory. They are exposed under a thatched shed open at the sides, and are suspended four feet above the ground.

The barometer readings are corrected to those of the standard, Newman's No. 86, formerly at the Surveyor-General's Office.

The hygrometric elements are obtained from Tables III, IV and V of the official tables computed in the Meteorological Office and based on Regnault's modifications of August's formula.

The directions and the movement of the wind are taken from the trace of a Beckley's anemograph.

The mouth of the rain-gauge is one foot above the ground. The rainfall reported on any day is for 24 hours preceding 8 A.M. of that day.

6. The estimated charges under establishment are Rs. 28,85,917 against Rs. 27,54,938, the estimate for 1908-09. There has been a steady increase in these charges since 1902-03, and the proportion of cost of establishment to the estimated revenue of the year works out to 23 per cent. The attention of the Commissioners has been drawn to the increased expenditure under this head.

7. The estimated receipts under "River Dues" are Rs. 22,65,000 against Rs. 21,55,000, the estimate for 1908-09. In sanctioning the levy of river dues as a permanent impost, it was the intention of Government that, as this item of revenue increases, there should be a reduction of charges in other directions. In view, however, of large additions to the Capital Debt of the Trust, the Lieutenant-Governor approves the recommendation of the Commissioners to defer for the present the question of reducing rates.

8. The Lieutenant-Governor also approves, under section 69 of the Calcutta Port Act, 1890, of the modified form in which the Budget has been submitted.

9. In exercise of the powers, vested in him by section 71 of the Act, the Lieutenant-Governor sanctions the estimate of the Income and Expenditure of the Commissioners for the year 1909-10.

By order of the Lieutenant-Governor of Bengal,

T. BUTLER,

Secretary.

SUMMARY OF THE METEOROLOGICAL OBSERVATIONS TAKEN IN BENGAL AND IN EASTERN BENGAL AND ASSAM FOR THE MONTH OF MARCH 1909.

FINE dry weather existed over the two Provinces during the larger part of the month.

In the 2nd week a shallow depression formed towards the north of the reporting area, but had little or no effect upon the weather. Local rain occurred in Chota Nagpur and Eastern Bengal on the 25th, but the falls were very slight.

The chief feature of the weather during the last week was the high temperature which prevailed at almost all stations.

The defect in rainfall varied from half an inch to 4 inches and was thus considerable; while the air throughout the month was exceptionally dry except just at the head of the Bay.

Summary of temperature.—The highest temperature recorded was 106°·3 at Midnapore and the lowest 48° was recorded at Rangpur and Daltonganj.

The following table gives the summary of temperature of each of the seven meteorological divisions of the Provinces of Bengal and Eastern Bengal and Assam for the month of March 1909:—

Summary of rainfall.—The rainfall work of the Province has been placed in the hands of the Director of Agriculture, Bengal, and the usual data regarding the actual and normal rainfall during the month are published by that officer. A short table, however, is attached to this report, giving the rainfall recorded during the month at the head-quarters of the various districts of the Province.

The mean pressure, temperature, etc., are deduced from eye observations.

The maximum and minimum temperatures are obtained from self-registering thermometers. All the ermometers are verified, and the readings have been corrected to a standard constructed and verified at the ew Observatory. They are exposed under a thatched shed open at the sides, and are suspended four feet ove the ground.

The barometer readings are corrected to those of the standard, Newman's No. 86, formerly at the urveyor-General's Office.

The hygrometric elements are obtained from Tables III, IV and V of the official tables computed in e Meteorological Office and based on Regnault's modifications of August's formula.

The directions and the movement of the wind are taken from the trace of a Beckley's anemograph.

The mouth of the rain-gauge is one foot above the ground. The rainfall reported on any day is for hours preceding 8 A.M. of that day.
